2020, with all its uncertainties and new ways of working, has understandably reinvigorated interest for U/HNW families around the world to have a closer look at their estate and succession planning.

There are numerous, often complex choices for U/HNW families and executives to make when it comes to succession planning - from the initial decision of a will versus a trust, to a trust versus a foundation, to choosing a trustee or foundation council, or setting up a Family Office.

The selection of the domicile of any trust or foundation is also a very important factor given the unprecedented growth of global wealth and the globalisation of families and their assets.

On this note, we are very pleased to invite you to join us for our exclusive webinar 'Are trusts and foundations (still) the best structures for asset preservation and succession for the world's wealthy?'

A panel of global experts will discuss and debate the current state of use of trusts and foundations by the world's wealthy and how that is likely to evolve over the next couple of decades.

To cater for our global audience, you can register for either of the following two sessions:
